Mumbling Minnie

To whom I hope it doesn't concern.

I'm not to be confused with Miss Mimbling Mummie—and anyway I didn't have anything to do with the Theological Issue and I've never, never converted anyone. And above all I haven't been to the Dean's office for ages . . . (but soon) . . .

Here's one the Theologs missed . . .

Theolog.—"Oh, my God!"

She—"Oh, you're always talking shop!"

Overheard in the blackout . . .

"Mm . . . mm! Nylon, eh?"

Story of the Week. Place: Douglas Hall. . .

A couple of gals, X and Y, were coming to town for the weekend and a couple of Douglas Hall lads, A and B, were going to take them out. However 3 Pranksters (also D.H. 1's)) faked a telegram saying the gals would arrive late—met the train themselves and eveninged with the wenches. . . In gratitude(?) the gals sent the Pranksters some fudge. The Pranksters GUZZLED it. It was later discovered that one of the chief ingredients of said fudge was (yes, you guessed it)—Ex-Lax!

To My Successor: (If I Have One).

You'll have no friends, but lots of fun.
You'll have to live at R.V.C.
And go to the Prom and the Spinsters' Spree.
And my dear, you can take it from me—
Plenty of dirt and a joke or two
And even the profs will go for you.
And—you'd better have nothing else to do
Than wonder what you'll next write about.
(And then to try to lie your way out.)
And now I lay aside my earphones, telescope, telephone, microscope, stethescope and rhyming dictionary in favor of other people's lecture notes—and in a few weeks a sheepskin (I hope) and a white collar. What is a sheepskin anyway?

CANDIDATES COMPETE FOR UNION POSITIONS

VICE-PRESIDENT

GORDON K. GREAVES

ARTS 3

First, before I present my platform for the vice-presidency of the Union, I would like to thank those who nominated me. As brevity is the better part of valour, there will be no delay in stating what I will try to do if elected to this office.

Whatever is done in the Union next year will be influenced to a great extent by the war and its necessary evil of increase in governmental expenditure. Consequently the dances of the students will have the principle of helping the national war effort as their raison d'etre. We will be encouraged to buy more and more savings stamps. Consequently if I am elected, I will encourage the students to have their informal hops and teadances at the Union. Only, instead

ARTS II

In presenting my platform to the students of this university for the position of Vice-President of the McGill Union, I would first like to thank those who nominated me for their confidence and support which they have so generously given me.

My platform is short, clear, and sincere. I have no intention of making rash promises or understandings which are merely political in nature and usually incapable of being fulfilled, such as the promise of lowering the rates for billiards, table tennis, or some other Union activity.

My promise is two-fold, and no one may doubt that I will live up to it. First, to discharge the duties of Vice-President of the Union to the best of my ability, and second,

MEDICINE I

In the past, prospective candidates for campus positions have put forward platforms which have been nothing but a series of promises and changes which are both impossible to carry out and impractical. I make no promises for any drastic changes in the policy of the McGill Union; instead, if elected, I shall do my utmost to carry out the present policy of the Union House Committee—i.e., that of service to all campus clubs and organizations, and to see that every student who is eligible to use the Union and its facilities shall be able to get the most out of it.

The Union House Committee has done a very fine job this past year, and I shall co-operate fully with the President and Secretary of the

Every student at McGill is a member of the Student's Undergraduate Society, and as such is entitled to share the responsibilities of this democratic institution. It is only fitting therefore that each and every one of you should be acquainted with the policies of those nominated to be your officers.

If successful in the coming election, I shall do my utmost to cooperate with your chosen executive. I shall endeavor to make the McGill Union a place where "comradeship and college spirit" may be promoted to the fullest. The position of secretary is one which requires a great deal of work, and I shall endeavor to carry forward this work to the best of my ability. The Union certainly should be made the

With present war conditions, I feel that the Union has a much more important function in undergraduate affairs today than it ever has has in the past. Activities, both on and off the campus, have been necessarily curtailed in every field. But, in my opinion, the Union does not come under this classification; the Union was intended to be a centre where the boys could spend their spare time. It was meant to

It is perhaps unfortunate that students nominated to office on administrational bodies are expected to present a platform, for even in those cases where things might best be left as they are, the candidate feels constrained to advise some changes. Radical adjustments of Union policy are neither desirable nor possible, especially in the present circumstances, and it is hardly fair to pretend that they are.

In years gone by, a most amazing series of reforms has been promised by candidates to Union posts, running the gamut from a project to install "personality" to projects to install complete new floorings. Promises of this sort are useless. Union finances do not run

Throughout the United States, and even in Canada, there has recently been a great deal of discussion of post-war problems and peace aims. Since, as Mr. Churchill has pointedly stated, the immediate aim of all our efforts is the attainment of victory, it is impossible to expect the governments of the British Empire to formulate at this stage of the struggle any comprehensive program of reconstruction. But that very fact makes it even more important that the average citizen should attempt to un-

QUORUM NECESSARY

Society Represents Final Voice of Students

MEMBERS MAY ATTEND

Special Meeting Will Enable Every Student to Hear Platform

In order that the candidates for the Presidency of the Students' Society for the coming year may present their platforms verbally to the student body at large, a meeting of the Students' Society will be held this afternoon at 5 p.m. in the McGill Union.

All students who have paid the University fees are automatically members of the Society, which was organized here about 30 years ago. It represents the final authority of the students—that is, all campus activities are carried out subject to the approval of the McGill Senate, but the final voice of the undergraduate themselves upon any matter is expressed through the Students' Society.

Meetings Important

Meetings were originally held regularly, but they have been called more recently only in cases of important matters requiring the consideration of the majority of students. A meeting may be called upon the request of twenty-five or more members of the society.

This society is the only official campus organization for the expression of the views and attitudes of the students.

Quorum Necessary.

In order that the meeting be parliamentary, a quorum of 100 is necessary, but all students wishing to know in more detail the platforms of the respective candidates are expected to attend. The President of this Society is elected annually, in the Spring.

RED DEBATERS GAIN DECISION

Stalker Wins Reford Trophy in Debate

Greenwood and Letiche Defeat Sir George Williams College Orators

Last Thursday Evening, The Reford Trophy was won by Alexander Stalker, fourth year Arts student and Vice-President of the McGill Debating Union Society. Other contestants were Martin Hollinger, Allister McDonald and Lloyd Henderson. The Trophy is emblematic of debating supremacy at McGill. Speaking on the affirmative side of the resolution "The World Is Too Much With Us" Stalker referred to Wordsworth that in his age the world was too much with him, but today the speaker said this is much more so. Wherever we go, the radio brings us all the news and keeps us in contact with the world away from us—it is too much with us.

Tomorrow night, at 7.30, the Commerce undergraduates will hold their final banquet in honour of the graduating class in the Venetian room of the Queen's Hotel. Mr. Brooke Claxton, K.C., M.P., will be the guest speaker. Tom Dailey, president of the Commerce Undergraduate Society, has announced that great interest has been shown in the affair and that it promises to be a success since a large number of tickets have already ben sold. He also emphasized that those who have not bought tickets yet and intend to attend the banquet, should do so at their earliest opportunity. Tickets at the price of $1 may be obtained from the class officers.

A turkey dinner will be served and music will be supplied. After the banquet the following newly elected officers of the Commerce Undergraduate Society will be presented:

Debating Nominations Due This Afternoon

Today is the last day for making nominations to the positions of Secretary and Junior Treasurer of the McGill Debating Union Society for the coming year. The signatures of at least ten members of the society are necessary to put up a candidate, and must be handed in to Mr. G. H. Fletcher at the McGill Union not later than 2.30 this afternoon.

The elections will be held at the general meeting of the Society this Thursday at 5 p.m. in the Union, when, in addition to these two executives, the President, Vice-President, and the four members of the Standing Committee will be elected. The nominations for the president and vice-president are already in and those for the Standing Committee will be called for at the meeting.

The present executive wishes to point out that all members of the Students' Society are members of the Debating Society and are entitled to run for office, vote, and sign nominations.

NEXT FRIDAY TO BE SET AS GREEK DAY

Drive Will Be Carried Out Then for 'Wounded Evzones' Fund'

Friday, March the 14th, will be GREEK DAY on our campus. The Wounded Evzone's Fund, a drive to raise funds for the medical relief of Greece, is to be carried out chiefly on that day. Blue and white ribbons, emblematic of the national colors of Greece, will be distributed to all, free of charge, while men students and attractive co-eds will act as canvassers for the day. Invitations have also been extended to the major universities throughout the Dominion to participate in this campaign, thus making it a Pan-Canadian movement.

The day on the McGill campus will come to a close with the Hellenic Informal, one of the last major events of the year, to be held in the Union Ballroom. Tickets have been priced at $1.25 per couple, in the hope that a large number will attend. The proceeds of the dance, of course, are to go towards the fund. Preparations are well under way, and one of the leading orchestras of the country under the direction of Andre Durieux, has been engaged. Tickets are now on sale at the offices of the various building caretakers and tuck shops.

Meanwhile contributions are being accepted. All wishing to aid the cause of medical relief of Greece should make checks payable to the McGill Greek Medical Relief Campaign, Room 907 Castle Building, 1410 Stanley street, Montreal.

U.T.C. Students Will Canvass Lorne Avenue

Students from all faculities living in the United Theological College have undertaken to canvass Lorne avenue in the city War Savings drive. John Herman, Med. 3, vice-president of the U.T.C. Student's Society, is in charge of the campaign. It was undertaken on request of the local War Savings Committee and the decision to help was taken by a special meeting of the residents last week. Some thirty-five students are taking part in the drive.

ARTSMEN VICTORS IN CHESS TOURNAMENT

The Arts and Science faculty defeated the Engineers in a chess tournament held Saturday afternoon. Of the five games played the Artsmen won four. The Arts team consisted of Lawson, Weldon, Munroe, Rose, and Ayoub, while the Engineers team consisted of Atkinson, Beaton, Schuller, Pavlasek, and Rea.

This is the first time in many years that there has been a chess tournament between these faculties, and it is hoped, stated the captain of the engineers team, "that we will have the privilege of meeting the Artsmen again next year." The chess

Meds Overshadow Engineers in Attendance at Combined Dance

On Friday evening, over two hundred couples crowded the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium to enjoy one of the most successful and largest major dances that the University has seen in some time. From the time that the committee in charge of the dance announced that no more tickets were available, it was evident that an unusual amount of interest was being taken in the combined affair. In fact, on Friday afternoon the college grapevine had it that tickets could be procured only from certain profiteers for six dollars.

The floor-space allotted for dancing occupied the centre of the gymnasium, an innovation from the Junior Prom. The central space was flanked on both sides by banks of tables which to the surprise of everyone, accommodated the entire crowd. The decorations presented a national note, consisting for a large part of mural coats-of-arms and banners. There was a cloud of disappointment hanging over the program in the form of a 1:30 deadline for dancing in virtue of the fact that Mart Kenney belongs to an Ontario "Dance Band Union." At the beginning of the dance, however, an announcement was made to the effect that dancing would continue to 2:30 with a half-hour intermission for "breakfast."

A second innovation was the blonde presence of a vocalist, who, at various intervals harmonized with members of the band. Unfortunately, she also belongs to the same Union and despite many requests from the floor, would not step off the platform to dance with the Engineers. Breakfast included assorted sandwiches, cakes and the perennial ice cream and coffee. There were a few shouts for bacon and eggs but the supply was greater than the demand.

It was difficult for even very discerning persons to figure whether Engineers or Meds held the spotlight for attendance. After a wide survey, however, the conclusion was, that despite the plumbers' great regard for dancing, et al, the Meds held the edge. In fact, there were some present, who might have been listed as graduate Meds. . . . We hear that this is the finale of the year. . . . We hope this is not true. . . . There have been rumors of an M.R.T.B. Ball when the battalion gets its full dress regalia.

Immediately, the Leander replied and after five salvoes the Italian struck.

Platforms

Today we publish editorials describing the position of Vice-President and Secretary of the McGill Union House Committee. The platforms and biographies of the candidates appear on page one. Read both editorials and biographies carefully, consider the platforms, and next Wednesday mark your ballot for the men whom you feel are best suited to occupy these positions.

The Vice-President of the Union

The Vice-President of the Union is a member of the three-man committee which controls the McGill Union. His duties, as laid down by the Constitution of the Union, are to take the place of the President when necessary. While this is the only duty assigned by the Constitution, the Vice-President is expected to share equally, with his two confreres, the complete responsibility of the administration of the largest single undergraduate organization on the Campus.

At one time the Union was managed by a committee of men representing the various faculties, clubs and societies on the Campus. At that time the duties were divided among the various men—each being responsible for a distinct department. It was felt a few years ago that this system was unsatisfactory and the Constitution was amended. The building is now managed by a three-man committee.

Naturally with such a small number of men on the Committee the work has become more centralized and greater efficiency is obtained. But this end may be obtained only if the three members are willing to share the responsibility and work together. Daily there are matters arising which call for the consideration of the President, naturally he cannot attend to all these things himself and a large amount of work falls on the shoulders of the Vice-President. The Vice-President must above all things be a man with enough spare time to devote to the work.

The position of Vice-President should be filled by a man willing to devote considerable time and energy to the work. It should be filled by a man who has had previous experience in undergraduate executive work and a man who mixes well with his fellow students. Such a position calls for a great deal of personal contact. The Union House Committee should not be, in our opinion, the training ground where the college man receives his first administrative experience; rather should he have received an introduction to this training in various college clubs, classes and undergraduate societies, and then, when he has had some experience let him handle this more important work.

Reprinted from Daily of March 1, 1935.

Secretary of the Union

Today the platforms of the candidates running for the position of secretary of the Union are being published.

This position on the Union executive calls for considerable time. The secretary naturally keeps the minutes of the Union House Committee, and is responsible for the correspondence. His position calls for his constant presence in the building and an intimate knowledge of the equipment, the staff, and the members of the executives of the different societies using the building. It is the place of the secretary to keep track of the engagement of rooms, to smooth out difficulties between conflicting clubs using the same rooms in the building, and to carry out the plans of the Committee.

One of the most important duties of the secretary is that of planning publicity to keep the students informed of the Union programme. At certain times of the year this work becomes fairly heavy, especially during the fall when the Union holds informals, when special meals are being served, and when tournaments are being conducted.

Because of these duties, the secretary of the Union has living accommodation in the building. This privilege has been accorded to enable the secretary to be on the job practically day and night and any person standing for this position should appreciate the responsibilities involved and should be prepared to devote considerable time to this work.

Only by the executive of the Union taking a personal interest in the welfare of the institution can it possibly fulfil the objects of its founder—namely, to be a place where all students may meet on an equal footing for fellowship and recreation.

On several occasions in the past people have been elected to the Union Committee who have regarded the position as a mere means to secure a room for the forthcoming year. It is evident that such an attitude leads to a laxity of administration which cannot be tolerated in this, one of the most important of the undergraduate activities under the control of the Council.

The Union House Committee is constantly faced with biased opinions. There appears to be a spirit of sectionalism rampant on the Campus. The man who accepts the position of secretary should be a well known person, one who will be in a position to cope with this lack of interest and even opposition; he should be a man who will be able and willing to obtain new business in the form of class and club lunches, dinners, and banquets; one who will work whole-heartedly for the welfare of the Union and the student.

MUSIC NOTES

Grand Playing by Montreal Orchestra.

A diverting program played in the grand manner was yesterday afternoon's Montreal Orchestra concert. Again, the orchestra was under the talented baton of the young British conductor, Bernard Naylor. The soloist of the afternoon was the Canadian-born baritone Bruce Boyce.

Mr. Boyce made his debut locally with considerable success. His is a voice of range and power, and in the arais 'Vision Fugitive' from Massenet's "Herodiade" and 'Eri Tu' from "The Masked Ball" by Verdi, he displayed considerable dramatic sense. As encores, with Severin Moisse at the piano, he offered "The Song of the Flea" by Moussorgsky and the last song from Vaughan Williams' cycle "Songs from Childhood." The Moussorgsky stood out by the ribald quality of Mr. Boyce's interpretation, and caught the fancy of his audience.

Mr. Naylor's beat would seem a delight to follow. As a result the entire afternoon's musicmaking was clean and precise, without the ghost of a muffed cue. Even the unpredictable brass came through with unerring accuracy and growing confidence.

Mr. Naylor opened the concert with Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" overture. Like the Third Symphony, a result of Mendelssohn's trip to Scotland in the summer of 1829, this war horse among concert overtures might well be considered a forerunner of the symphonic poem, as developed later in the century by Franz Liszt. Here is the sea, though a decorous and symmetrically-patterned sea it is, and without the dynamics of mood that are so exquisitely caught in Debussy's "La Mer." Mendelssohn's sea is sunny even in its raging storms, and it was this feature of the music that stood out in Naylor's reading. The performance was beautifully shapen, and glowed with sheer exhilaration.

The strings alone, presented Arensky's Variations on a Theme by Tchaikovsky—the theme in question being one of the most wistfully charming bits of melody that even the great Russian symphonist has written. Arensky's string treatment is a delight to the ear, caressing the tune through seven perfect variations, each one a flawless, individual entity. Here the stringmen covered themselves with glory, playing with opulence of tone and sympathetic understanding.

The great D minor Symphony of Cesar Franck brought the afternoon to an inspired close. A profound mystical experience, this music surges from the soul, and quickly establishes its religious quality by the organlike sound of its orchestration. This is accomplished by a skilful use of the customary woodwinds, fortified by a bass clarinet, the English horn figuring prominently.

Mr. Naylor played the symphony with all stops wide open, building a mighty edifice of sound from the clusters of instrumental timbre that Franck has developed with such consummate mastery. With it, he proved that even Franck's intensely personal idiom, with its soaring emotional flights was well within his scope, and that he is a conductor to be reckoned with. —L.E.A.

Defauw Conducts Again Tomorrow.

For the fifth time this season, Desire Defauw will be at the head of the orchestra of Les Concerts Symphoniques, tomorrow night at Plateau Hall. The soloist of the evening is to be the French-Canadian pianist Germaine Malepart. Miss Malepart will be heard with the orchestra in the D minor piano concerto of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. In addition M. Defauw has programmed the Symphony No. 5, "From the New World," by Dvorak; Jean Sibelius' tone poem, "Swan of Tuonela;" Beethoven's overture to "Egmont;" and the symphonic poem "Stenka Rasin," by Alexander Glazounov.

The Forge

The Forge, McGill's only publication of a strictly literary nature, appeared last week in the sole issue for this year. To quote from the editorial on the first page, "The Forge does not pretend to be anything more than a magazine written by and for university students, whose intention it is to foster creative work in the University." In this laudable undertaking, judging from the contents, it has had at least a qualified success. In fact, taking the work, which must be considered representative, one might say that it is just a little too violently creative. The attempt to be literary has brought many of the authors dangerously close to incomprehensibility.

An example of this is "A Sum in Addition," by R. B. Ruddick. It is a story of French-Canadian frustration which after a perfectly straightforward beginning, launches into an unhappy, not to say, obscure symbolism. The reader will either in some bewilderment suppose that somehow or other the point has escaped him, or, and this is more likely, he will conclude that there is no point at all.

"Experiment with Irony" started out promisingly. The central character was particularly well conceived but its author felt impelled to scale him down to fit in with a trivial excuse for a plot, not realizing that the character was strong enough to stand without benefit of the feeble prop of the plot.

"Ch'ai Yao" and "Sun on the Little Hills" both belong on the affirmative side. The first, by Marjorie Simpson, is a delicately told tale in the first person. The story is sufficiently light to border on fantasy, usually a treacherous mode of expression. Perhaps because of the locale, perhaps because of the unreal quality of the story, for whatever reason, "Ch'ai Yao" never loses itself in timid abstraction. The author maintains a sensitive intelligent grasp of her material.

"Sun on the Little Hills," by G. Kohl, shows an imaginative impressionist style. Its originality tends to shield a few faults, principally a disappointing finish. Kohl found it essential to lose identity with his subject and the transition is abrupt and dissatisfying. By this sudden divorce he lost the mood of the story.

Katharine Aikens in her poem "Without Military Pomp" has chosen a subject unfortunately trite. The banality of the subject, which has lost, through use, any elements of drama it might have possessed, detracts from her expressive style.

In spite of these criticisms that seem largely negative, we feel that "The Forge" is certainly to be encouraged. It is proof that an interest in creative literature, and even more, the ability to produce work of outstanding originality exists at McGill. —M.S.W.

BLACKOUT.
AT THE ORPHEUM.

British Nationals picture, produced by John Corfield, directed by Michael Powell. Story by Emeric Pressburger, scenario by Michael Powell and Brock Williams. Music by Richard Addinsel.

Characters.	Players.
Captain Andersen	Conrad Veidt
Mrs. Sorensen	Valerie Hobson
Skold (Mate of S.S. Helvig)	Hay Petrie
Skold (Chef of "Three Vikings")	Hay Petrie
Mr. Pidgeon	Esmond Knight
Van Dyne	Raymond Lovell
Hendrick	Charles Victor
Singer in "Regency"	Paddy Browne

The latest thrill picture, somewhat in the tradition of "Foreign Correspondent." The scene is for the most part laid in the murky gloom of London under total blackout and the tangled mystery of spy and counterspy gains much strength from the setting.

The story is packed with thrills and surprises, and it requires careful watching to grasp the significance of each move. It is a real piece of artistry in that many actions are not carried through to the end, but the conclusions are only suggested, leaving the audience to interpret the situation for themselves.

The plot is laid in the fall of '39 when contraband control was the chief worry of the British navy. Conrad Veidt plays the role of the Captain of a Danish ship which is anchored in a control port. At night two British spies, Mrs. Sorensen, played by Valerie Hobson and Mr. Pidgeon played by Esmond Knight, escape to London and Captain Andersen follows them in an effort to have them back on the boat before dawn. The mysterious happenings of this one night in inky black London make up most of the picture. Captain Andersen and Valerie Hobson are captured by German spies located in the heart of London, and make a thrilling escape in a brilliant manner. The atmosphere is well maintained throughout. The love story between the two leading characters is to say the least superflous, but does not deter the action of the picture.

Blackout is good entertainment. . . . but

OPEN ELECTIONS.

Editor,
McGill Daily,
March 8th, 1941.
Sir,

As signatories of the petition to call the Students Society meeting this afternoon, we wish to explain our interest therein.

We feel that open elections will help make the students' representatives more responsible to their electorate, and the student body more aware of the possibilities of the self-government they possess. Printed platforms are insufficient. Too often a candidate does not know the true demands and limitations of the post for which he is nominated: his platform is therefore vague or impractical. Too often a candidate is elected on a platform he makes little or no attempt to carry out. Once elected he may, with generous limits, flout the wishes of the majority of his electorate. Were he required to explain his platform to an intelligent and questioning audience, he would inform himself of his future duties and make sure of his planks, or he would not be elected. Were he required to give an account of his stewardship while in office, he would be more sincere in his election promises and more receptive to students' requests.

On the other hand we recognize, that except at infrequent intervals, most students are too poorly informed, or too indifferent—perhaps lazy—to care much what candidates say or representatives do. This is, we submit, only partly the fault of students themselves. The freshman is the root of any Students' Society, yet almost no attempt is made in the Freshman Program to educate him in the workings of student democracy. During the year a multitude of councils, faculty, class, and independent, special-interest societies and executives, all function each in its own mysterious way; dances and sports spring up he knows not whence; he knews neither who is responsible to him nor for what he himself is responsible. Every now and then he may glimpse in the Daily, chance upon in the handbook (should he read part of it), or pick up by hearsay some partial account or prejudiced view of campus politics. Throughout the year real issues may be shrouded in secrecy, at election time in a mess of vague and empty verbiage. Photographs are a poor substitute for real personalities, and in most elections many students have never even seen all the candidates whose names appear on their ballots. Their only means of learning of the candidates are second-hand through printed platforms, whispering campaigns, and lobbying—all of which are subject to abuse.

This state of affairs is not encouraging. Students are unlikely to show interest in campus affairs without a far-sighted Students' Council to lead them. Yet ambitious schemes for war funds, athletic programs, co-operatives, scholarships, etc., which are realized on other campuses, are unlikely to be achieved here unless the Council receives some active support from the student body at large. We feel that open elections might help us out of this vicious circle by:

1. Helping to formulate practical programs.
2. Enabling students to select candidates capable of carrying out such programs, and
3. Enabling students to support and criticize their Council throughout the year.

The meeting this afternoon will be, to the best of our knowledge, the first experiment in open elections at McGill. As the Daily has so amply pointed out, this experiment was conceived at the last minute. We deplore this fact and the inconvenience it has caused the Daily staff and the members of the Council. But we do feel that this cause is such a worthy one that even a last-minute effort can make it a success. We trust there are other students who share our faith and will be present.

Society Meeting.

Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir,

There has been a great deal of discussion on the campus in the past few days concerning the Students' Society Meeting. If I may, I would like to help clarify the situation.

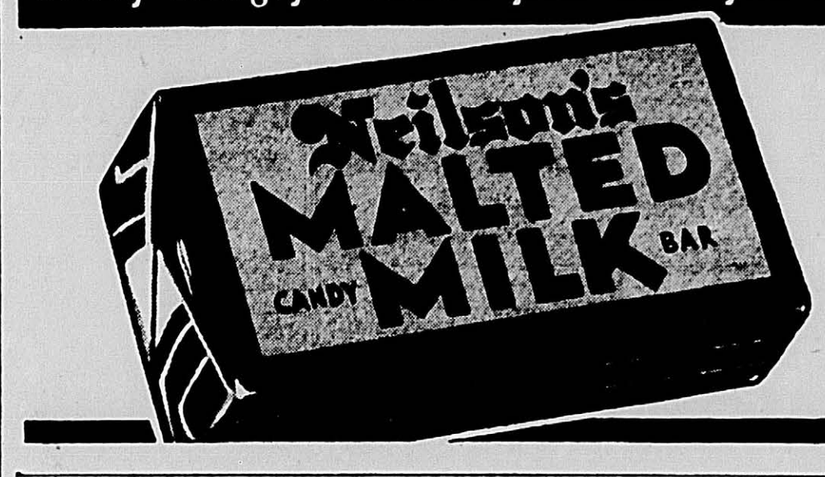

All during the term some students have been discussing various problems, such as the raising of fees, the dismissal of the C.O., lack of consultation with students about military training, cancellation of intercollegiate sports, and so on. But neither the Council nor the students themselves acted in a positive and enlightened manner to

B Company Nip Engineers 4-3 in First Game of Final Hockey Series

Detroit Takes Les Canadiens By 4-0 Count

Stu Smith Makes Pro Debut

By J.O.D.

On Saturday night at the Forum, Canadiens in one of their worst games of the season, lost a shutout victory to the Detroit Red Wings 4-0. This was Mowers 4th. shutout of the year, and it put Jack Adams' team four points up on Rangers in sole possession of third place, while the Canadiens remained deep in sixth place but assured of a play-off spot.

Throughout the Canadiens were outplayed by the smart Detroit team and Bibeault in the Canucks' net had to do some fancy blocking to keep the scoring down. However at 15.40 of the first period Bruneteau combined with Howe and Goodfellow to score what proved to be the winning goal. Then five minutes later Howe shifted inside the Canadien defence and taking a pass from Goodfellow lifted a shot past Bibeault.

After this it was Detroit forcing all the way but being unable to break into the scoring again until the third period when at 2.20 Giesebrecht converted Orlando's rebound to make it 3-0. At 16.50 on a defensive lapse by the Canadiens, Motter on a play with Bruneteau and Stewart scored the last tally.

WARES INJURED.

Although Detroit had a good night in the win column they lost the services of right wing Eddie Wares who half-way through the second period broke his shoulder after a crash into the boards at the North end of the rink. This was a bad blow to the Red Wings for it broke up their best line of Wares, Grosso and Abel.

Referee Mickey Ion had another hectic night, and was forced to hold up the game for five minutes in the third period while the ice was cleared of rubbers, coins, programmes and what have you. In all, six penalties were handed out.

The outstanding factor of the night to the near capacity crowd of Montreal fans was the first appearance, as a pro, of Stu Smith, leading Q.S.H.L. scorer this year; he showed great promise. Also the Saturday night turnout gave Paul Bibeault a great ovation as he played his second professional game for the Canadiens.

Syd. Howe and Giesebrecht starred for Detroit, with the former scoring his 20th goal of the season and with an added assist moved into a third place tie in the scoring race with Brian Hextall. For Canadiens Getliffe and Quilty played driving games.

"WE REGRET THAT . . ."

The McGill co-ed hockey team were the unfortunate victims of circumstance on Saturday afternoon, the unfortunate circumstance being that the Macdonald hockey team not only repulsed them but removed them from the position of one of the most prominent women hockey teams in North America. One notable member of the Red team, when questioned, blushed a deep purple and refused to divulge the score.

COMPANY SOFTBALL STARTS THIS WEEK

The Inter-Company Softball League is scheduled to commence early this week. Each Company will be allowed to enter only one team, but unlimited substitution of players is permitted.

Already considerable interest has been evidenced in the Inter-Company Fixture which will be of short duration. Teams will be divided into two groups with each team playing every other team in its group only once. At the end of this short series the leading teams will be matched off for an elimination tournament and the survivor will be declared Inter-Company Champs.

Though entries have already been received from all Platoons, the Company Sports Representatives are asked to name a Company Team made up out of these. The Company line-up should be turned in to the Athletic Office immediately so that there will be no delay in the opening of the League.

A schedule is published in today's daily and will appear on the Locker Room Notice Board. All persons concerned are asked to watch both and to notify their team-mates of the scheduled games.

Bud Farmer Leads Attack, Scoring Brace of Tallies

Second Game of Crucial Series Tomorrow

The Intercompany Hockey Final got underway at the Forum last Friday when the B outfit, led by Bud Farmer and Bill Macdonald, scored a 4-3 victory over the scrappy engineers, to take a one goal lead in the two-game total goal series. The second and final game will take place tomorrow.

HIBBARD BAGS TWO.

Farmer scored both his goals in the middle frame and Bill MacDonald drew assists on both of them. Jim Hibbard was the bright star for the losers also bagging a brace of goals as did Farmer for the winners.

Play was rather rough going during the first period and Ralph Adams, the referee, was called upon to make some close decisions. Kennedy shot the doctors into an early lead when he beat Ash. Hibbard in the engineers' nets from close in, after taking a pass from Bruce Crutchfield. The count was evened a few minutes later, however, as the E Company boys fought furiously for the tying marker. Hibbard was the marksman here when he broke through the enemy's defence to score unassisted. There was no further scoring during the remaining minutes although each team came close on various occasions.

GOOD HOCKEY.

The second period produced the best hockey of the contest as play went from end to end. Fyfe made a couple of fine stops to stem the fast charging engineers. The doctors again went into the lead as Farmer sank his first goal cutting sharply in front of the nets, and flipping the puck in the mesh behind Hibbard. The E Company team again erased a one goal deficit when Peto made it 2-2 with an unassisted goal. The lead went to the doctors two minutes later as Farmer raced in to take Macdonald's passout and give his team a 3-2 edge at the end of the second period.

Bill MacDonald put the game on ice for the B company outfit shortly after the period started, taking Patrick's pass to make it 4-2 for his team. It looked like it might remain that way until the end of the game, but Hibbard came through with his second point to wind up the scoring for the day. Owen drew an assist on this final score.

Both teams played fine hockey throughout and on the play appeared to be fairly well evenly balanced. The engineers were without their winger Cliff Wallace, but seemed not to miss him as much as was thought. Grant Morrison did not get into the game for the winners, but there is no doubt he would make a welcome addition.

The line-ups:

Patrick	defence	Owen
McMartin	defence	Marriott

Indoor Track Meet Gets Under Way at Gym Today

Medicine Ball Throw Opens Inter Company Competition

The second Inter-Company track meet gets under way this afternoon at 6 p.m. in the Pine Avenue Gym, and will be continued on Wednesday at a likewise hour. Certain authoritative sources claim that better weather conditions will prevail for this indoor meet, than those met with at last fall's foot-carnival when the competitors shivered their way around Molson Stadium in the winter's first snowstorm.

Consequently the track rivalry between B and C Companies will take on a new aspect. It will not be a test of the individual's relative endurance against the elements, but against competition of the same species. Thus C Company has high hopes of removing its chief opponents from dominance of the track scene. At the same time other companies will present a more serious threat to the two leaders by reason of an increased number of entrants.

The meet will open with the medicine-ball throw. This event is expected to attract wide attention, as numerous men, athletic and otherwise, have gained considerable prowess with the said spherical mass by diligent practice at the "break" while on parade.

This event will be followed by the 50-yard dash, the quarter mile run and the high jump in that order. The distance men and jumpsters have been whipping themselves into condition these past two weeks, although many observers believe that no further conditioning is required after just one of Bert Light's P.T.'s. This point remains to be decided by the individual.

The remaining events on today's program are the 50 yard hurdles, one mile run, standing broad jump and relay (each man one lap). (Ed. Note: Stick to your own lap, boys.) The first ten men in every event count points for their respective companies. The second half of the meet will take place on Wednesday.

Last Intersection Meet Run Off Yesterday

The last co-ed intersection meet was run off on Hill 71 yesterday morning under rather blizzardous conditions.

Three girls copped the first three places in both slalom and downhill to keep the field of leaders narrowed down. Sylvia Grove put together the four lowest times, totalling 80.6 seconds. Audrey Bovey was next with 86.1 seconds and Joan Anderson third with 93.6 seconds. However, Audrey Bovey was the combined winner of the two events, by virtue of a first in the downhill and second in the slalom.

Section D 1 were the Meet winners, placing co-eds in second, fifth and sixth positions. However, the points earned in this meet do not count in the Inter-sectional standings, as they were only five sections represented.

solve these problems. The coming of a campus election brings to mind even more strongly the fact that candidates have often made promises but once in office have done very little to estimate what the students society wanted, nor did the students ever consult with their elected officers how best to meet their needs.

Therefore, some of us, who felt this most keenly, called a meeting of the Students' Society for reasons outlined both above, and in the petition, (which the Daily did not publish in full). We would like to see a Council that will be in constant contact with students and really represent the wishes of students. We would like to see a student body that takes responsibility for democratic self government on the campus. In order to accomplish this it is necessary that students know what the candidates intend to do, and that students express themselves so that the council will know what is required of it.

The fact that some students have called this meeting is a step in the direction of student responsibility for their own affairs. In order to help this step become a real forward movement, a committee has been formed which has discussed these matters and which is planning to distribute a leaflet on Monday morning, to show that there is a way for students to express that democratic spirit which undoubtedly exists on the campus. We seek the co-operation of all students who have constructive suggestions which will aid the students society and the council make democracy work at McGill.

Sincerely,
LAURA SCHECTER.

"Margie," the added feature, is a combination of a sweet young romance and slapstick comedy, neither of which are particularly brilliant.

REVOLTE.

AT CINEMA DE PARIS.

Few British or American pictures can equal the France-Film production "Revolte" in depth of human understanding. The internal struggle for freedom, complete freedom to do what he likes whenever he likes which goes on in the mind of the young man, Rene Dary, will impress even those who understand little French. It is only through the combined efforts of Rene Renoir, captain of the warship on which Dary is serving, and Katia Lova, his fiance, that his attitude is changed and he becomes a new man, without a chip constantly on his shoulder and a belief that the world owes him a living.

All three, Rene Renoir, Rene Dary, and Katia Lova give good performances. Renoir is the typical sea captain, tough but kind when necessary, and Dary the devil-may-care adventurer. Since the struggle is an internal one the action is narrowed down, taking place, for the most part, on board a French warship, which becomes a little fatiguing at times, but this does not detract from the general good quality of the picture. It is well worth seeing for those who are interested in people and the thoughts that govern their sometimes unusual actions.

"Mr. and Mrs. Smith" is a sophisticated comedy, typical of a type emerging from Hollywood for the last few years. It is not original but provides entertainment, and as such is a good picture. Robert Montgomery takes top acting honours, but we still prefer to see him in the type of role, which he portrayed in "Night Must Fall" and "Earl of Chicago." Hollywood seems to think that the light sophisticated role is more his natural milieu. The same holds true for Carole Lombard, who returns to light comedy after adventuring in serious drama with "They Knew What They Wanted."

Briefly, the story deals with a young married couple, ably performed by Carole Lombard and Robert Montgomery, who find after three years of marriage that through some technicalty, their marriage is illegal. The scenes that follow deal with Montgomery's attempt to win back his wife after her newly-found freedom. In the meanwhile, Montgomery's law partner has stepped into the picture and forms the third side of the eternal triangle. It would be really too mean to give away secrets and tell whether Mr. Smith finally manages to win back the Mrs. But everything does end placidly at Lake Placid.

A "March of Time, America Non-Belligerent," an excellent "Donald Duck" and an "Information Please" complete the program.

"Tall, Dark, and Handsome," this week's feature picture at the Capitol Theatre, has been termed by the New York Times as the surprise picture of the year. Your reviewer can't quite agree with this opinion but this film is certainly far from the run-of-the-mill variety of gangster epic. The new slant which director H. Bruce Humberstone has put in seems to take it out of the class of gangster pictures completely.

Cesar Romero is featured as the lead in the role of a gangster chief, and his portrayal is extremely fluent. As the leader of the rival gang of hoodlums, Sheldon Leonard as Pretty Willie is successfully sinister and convincing. The two rival gangster chiefs try to exceed each other in their prowess at decimating the other's gang and the interest of the picture is centred about the way each performs his "so-called" duty.

Stanley Clemens who plays the part of Harry, the conveniently adopted son of Cesar Romero, steals just about every scene he appears in. He is a youngster but if he keeps repeating in the future with as much power he will be an up and coming actor in a few years. Charlotte Greenwood has a small part but her humour and quick wit so adequately supplied by a very good script, help to give the picture its quick pace. Milton Berle also helps to keep the picture rolling well along its path by his excellent performance as Cesar Romero's lieutenant.

The second feature, "Ride, Kelly, Ride," is a typical grade B picture of which the less said the better. A Technicolor short on Virginia rounds out the program, which would be rendered much more enjoyable if the second feature were omitted.

into the millions, as those who are in any way acquainted with the place must certainly realize. And too, it is highly probable that after more than two decades a workable system has been found, not to be tremendously improved in one fell swoop by a student reformer.

The above may be criticised on the grounds that it is largely negative. That may be, yet I would hold that it is the only possible honest approach.

My platform, then, is to maintain the status quo as far as this would prove advisable. But if elected, I would advocate and assist in executing all reasonable reforms that meet with the approval of the other members of the House Committee and the student body at large.

be their Club. I feel that only to a very limited extent have the facilities been made use of to the fullest extent in the past.

I shall endeavor to continue the present Union policy of having a number of inexpensive, informal dances throughout the year. In addition, I shall try to maintain a high standard in the cafeteria for the benefit of those that must eat near the University as well as for those wishing to hold banquets and supper meetings. The billiard room has always been a great attraction and I feel that different arrangements can be made along the lines followed at other universities in order to make it more attractive to a larger number of undergraduates. The re-arrangements that have taken place at the Union recently have made more space available. In this regard it is my wish to have a library installed near the reading room so that interesting reading may be available to supplement the material already supplied.

In the light of the above, it is my intention to make the Union appeal to a greater proportion of the student body. If elected, I shall certainly make it my duty to see that student opinion is fairly represented on the Union House Committee through me over questions of policy.

of the usual $1.25 in cash for an entry to the dance we will make the price be for each of the couples to buy an entirely new war savings stamp booklet with one stamp in it for each of them plus the difference between this and the old price to pay for the orchestra. As the ordinary activities of the campus will, no doubt, be further encroached upon by the exigencies of the war, therefore the sprees, hops, etc., will be financial successes. Especially if there is sufficient publicity given to the events. This can be done by adequate co-operation with the Daily, and by seeing that there are notices placed prominently on the notice boards of all the faculties advertising the students of the occasion.

According to the "bible" there are about one hundred clubs on the campus. This year they have not had much chance to perform the various functions that they were intended to do. To the best of my ability I will help them to have accommodation for their activities in the Union, and will see that their main efforts do not clash, as was nearly the case this year with the Cosmo Ball and the Plumbers' Ball. The Union should be able to help the various clubs and faculties with their social aspirations. By more skilled planning we shall have our big dances staggered at even periods throughout the year. Unfortunately this was not altogether the case during the present year.

At times the Executive of the Union have been accused of being inaccessible to the average student. If elected, I will be glad to receive any verbal or written advice and requests, and I will advise the Union House Committee of the messages and thus the matter will be taken under consideration.

Activities.

I have been active in the C.O.T.C. from 1937-40, have been a reporter and columnist in the Daily for the same period, and have consequently been close to all the activities of the Campus life. The Historical Society, Bridge Club, Anglican Club, Political Economy Club and Scarlet Key have me on the rolls during 1938-39-40. Unfortunately other activities of a military character have kept me from partaking of their activities this year.

CHURCH MUSIC IS OPEN HOUSE TOPIC

S.C.M. Meeting Features Illustrated Address by Rev. F. H. Wilkinson

Following the Chapel Service in Divinity Hall last evening, the Student Christian Movement held "Open House" in Strathcona Hall. The special speaker for the evening was Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, of the church of St. James the Apostle.

His topic for the evening was the rise and development of church music. Mr. Wilkinson has studied this subject extensively, as a hobby. He stated that the origin of such music was lost in obscurity, but that simple tunes arose early, under the influence of Christianity, and then he went on to trace its rise by the Ambrosian and Gregorian systems of the 3rd and 4th centuries, its improvement by the introduction of types of obligatos in the 10th and 11th, and still later in the 16th, by the introduction of secular airs and the rudiments of harmony. He illustrated his lecture with recordings and with piano music.

GOOD MORNING, BILL IN RETURN SHOWING

2151 Lincoln. All proceeds will be for the benefit of the I.O.D.E. war fund.

Already presented three times in Moyse Hall, it is expected that attendance at the coming production will be good. The cast includes John Villiers in the role of Lord Tidmouth, Anne Clark as Lottie, Leonard Griffith in the part of Sir Hugo Drake, David Ashdown as Bill Paradene, Jean Thirlaway as Dr. Sally Smith, Mary McCrimmon, who plays the Maid, and Ian McCrimmon as the Page Boy. The play is under the direction of John Mellor.

"Good Morning, Bill" is a fast moving comedy in which the tangled loves of the four principals create many amusing situations, and in which confusion reigns until near the very end of the play. Bill Paradene is on the verge of marrying Lottie Burke, when he falls in love with Dr. Sally Smith, while Lottie, who has set out with the express purpose of marrying Bill, finally weds Lord Tidmouth, who has dropped in merely to return to Bill an unlucky umbrella. Sir Hugo Drake, Bill's uncle, all the while under the impression that his nephew is about to marry Lottie, whom he despises, creates much of the confusion, which, though he doesn't know it, eventually results in a happy conclusion.

JACKSON DELIVERS FIRST TALK TODAY

derstand clearly the problems that we shall confront when hostilities come to an end.

Particular interest, therefore, attaches to the three public lectures that Mr. Gilbert Jackson is to give at McGill University this week on "The Economic Aftermath of War." In the opening lecture, this evening at 8.30 in Moyse Hall, he will tackle the basic problems that will be encountered in the physical reconstruction of Western Europe, since the solution of these will demand immediate attention. On Wednesday the lecture will deal with the question of costs and prices in Canada, placing particular emphasis upon the fact that the steadily growing public debt of the Dominion will require a level of taxation upon our people that will tend to strangle economic initiative unless we succeed in developing a framework of costs and prices appropriate to the post-war responsibilities of Canada. In the concluding lecture, on Friday evening, Mr. Jackson will pull together the threads of the discussion and analyse the post-war outlook for Canada.

Few economists are better qualified than Mr. Gilbert Jackson to essay this task. Prior to the World War, during which he saw active service in India and Arabia, Mr. Jackson was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. After the war he was largely responsible for the planning and development of the course of economical studies, and it was for this reason that he was appointed Acting Director of the School of Commerce at McGill University in 1939 in order to complete the reorganization that Dr. James had already started. He has also served with various Commissions and public bodies in Ontario, and was for some years economic adviser of the Bank of England. He, therefore, brings to the consideration of the problems treated in these lectures a wealth of economic knowledge and business experience which should make them particularly valuable.

represented by Jack Greenwood and Jack Letiche won the debate against Sir George Williams college which was represented by Herman Buller and Fred Kerner.

Mr. D. H. S. Black, a lawyer with the Travellers Insurance Company, and the Montreal Junior Board of Trade, Dr. C. A. Dawson, head of the department of socialogy at McGill, and Mr. Francis Hankin, a former McGill debater, formed the jury.

Buller, who opened the debate for Sir George Williams, upholding the negative of the resolution, that "Canada Should Finance the Present War by Taxation," said that taxes are the best way to curtail consumption of luxuries and thus increase the country's ability to finance war needs.

Greenwood, speaking on the negative, said the costs of this war could not be born by one generation alone, but should be distributed over a long range of time by loans from other countries.

The second speaker of the affirmative returned to the problem of inflation, explaining its dangers. Jack Letiche, second speaker of the negative, dealt with the problem of international clearing, which is now interrupted because Canada delivers the goods to Britain and imports a good deal from the U.S.

The three business meetings which are open to all medical students and interns, but at which only delegates may vote, will consider the different activities of CAMSI on the various campuses. The second business session which will be on Saturday will discuss only intern problems. At the last business session on Sunday an election of officers will take place.
